

Paul Little

Nepal, Ivan Illich, and flesh-eating killer bugs: the journey of a clinical researcher

Paul Little is currently Director of the NIHR Programme Grants for Applied Research Board. He has been a GP for 20 years and is Professor of Primary Care Research at the University of Southampton. His major research interests are in facilitating self-help and behaviour change for both acute and chronic conditions (particularly the use of information technology to support patients, the management of infections (including antibiotic use and antimicrobial resistance), patient-centred consulting, and the investigation of complementary approaches.