“It’s the sustainability, stupid!” – why health and social care needs to reinvent itself to survive

A sustainable health and care system delivers high quality, cost-effective care together with improved public health, within the limits of financial, social and environmental resources. The NHS still has a long way to go to become sustainable, although our 21st century ‘perfect storm’ of climate change, environmental degradation, austerity and ageing population mean the need has never been more urgent. How do we metamorphose to enable our survival?

Date: 10 January 2018 (video link to F083 Truro) Time: 13.00-14.00

Venue: Room JS07, Smeall Building, St Luke’s Campus
